DETAILED ACTION

Specification Objections

The abstract is objected to because the term --buckling-- on line 2 is misspelled.

Correction is required.

The specification is objected to because the term --buckling-- "stripes" found in paragraph 4 is unclear in context. Additionally it is noted that applicant is utilizing the improper use of square brackets to designate paragraphs. The paragraphs should be numbered within square brackets simply with numerals such as [0001], [0002], etc. Additionally, the last paragraph lacks a paragraph number. A substitute specification properly designating the paragraphs using appropriate notation is required. Correction is required.

Claim Objections

Claim 1-7 are objected to because of the following informalities: in regard to claims 1, 3, and 5, the term "buckling" is misspelled on line 2 of each claim. The dependent claims are objected to because they depend from objected to claims. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. §102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. §102(b) as being clearly anticipated by Lerra et al. (US 6226844).

Lerra et al. (figures 8-10) teach a rotary buckle comprising: a female buckling element, comprising an opening and a buckling portion, wherein a side opposite to the opening comprises a receiving chamber for receiving a knitted belt; and a male buckle element, comprising a fitting portion for fitting into the opening of the female buckling element and a latching portion for positioning into the buckling portion of the female buckling element, wherein a side opposite to the fitting portion comprises a receiving chamber for receiving a knitted belt in the side opposite to the opening of the female buckling element comprises a track along which a directing element of the receiving chamber can be rotated, and wherein a side opposite to the fitting portion comprises a receiving chamber and a side opposite to the fitting portion of the male buckling element comprises a track 101, 102, 103 along which a directing element of the receiving chamber can be rotated. Figures 10 and 10a show the directing elements of the receiving chambers for both the male buckling element and the female buckling element in the aligned position, but clearly fitting within tracks. Figure 9 shows the rotation of the receiving chambers relative to the male and female buckling elements. This rejection is written for claim 5 as this claim is the most detailed of the three independent claims. However, claims 1 and 3 are rejected for the same reasons since they only require either the female buckling element or the male buckling element to have the track and rotatable directing element, respectively, and therefore fall within the rejection of claim 8. As to the dependent claims, and the flexible nature of the strap to which the receiving chambers of the male and female buckling elements are secured permits these receiving chambers to rotate up to 90° relative to those straps and thereby meet the language of these claims.

Conclusion
